In 2017 RKB guarantees another program brimming with energy and ideas. At ease in classical as well as contemporary styles... reports The New York Times. Rebecca Kelly produces an engaging blend of movement that transports the audience and showcases the individuality of her beautiful dancers as they soar, sail, and spin through chamber works that explore topical issues and celebrate the natural world.

The ballets this season include two which draw upon the upstate environment for its themes, “Adirondack Elemental: Earth, Waters, Snow” and Apayaana. Apayaana means “flight” in Sanskrit and takes climate change as its springboard, and the monarch butterflies were the messengers. Apayaana premiered in August 2011. Three weeks later, Hurricane Irene blasted through the region, causing the Ausable River to rise to a record 18 feet above flood levels.

ONSTAGE, offered every summer since 1989, has reached thousands of young people and their families and taken them on a journey of ideas, expressions, and widened the horizons of imagination. RKB’s 2-week performance summer day camp at the Lake Placid Center for the Arts, takes place

July 10-21, 2017. For registration, visit the website, www.RebeccaKellyBallet.org, Go to the North Country activities. You can download a form – or contact RKB at RKBallet@gmail.org

ONSTAGE PUBLIC Performance, Friday, July 21, at 10:30am. Wild, woolly and imaginative, yet only 45 minutes long!
