John Johanson presents:

“A Few Degrees,
A Profound Change”

A symposium and discussion
Thursday, August 21, 6:30-8pm
Refreshments served

John Johanson is an upstate New York based designer and natural resource manager focused on sustainable architecture, historic rehabilitation, and stewardship of our forest resources, particularly in the Adirondack Park. John holds a Master's degree from Rensselaer, and is active in conservation and arts non-profits.

“When we came across John Johanson’s climate change letter of 2013, it revealed this individual had taken the time to face the great challenge ahead and FIND OUT MORE, to pursue the questions and the myths, to obtain and share a better understanding of our world. So, over a year ago, we asked John to prepare his thoughts so that we could host a symposium to share these important findings and explanations with our community.” Tahawus Center
